The FLLAC Collaborative Presents:

Category 4 : Making the Connection: English Language Learners and Subject Matter Texts

This course helps middle and high content teachers evaluate the literacy requirements for English learners in their subject area. In this interactive course teachers will examine approaches for helping their English learners develop in the areas of reading, writing, and vocabulary knowledge. Teachers will be able to plan appropriate reading and writing activities for the English learners in their content classes.

There will be required hours done outside of class in the form of readings and assignments.

One graduate credit is available through Cambridge College for $50.

Boni-esther Enquist has taught English as a Second Language, bilingual education, Spanish, Math and Science to students mostly in the middle and high school levels. Boni-esther's anecdotes of real classroom situations help to make the content of this course move from the level of theory into the very practical. Ms. Enquist is an adjunct faculty for several colleges and has worked on curriculum and compliance projects for various school districts.
